

Twyfelfontein Country Lodge, Twyfelfontein

Set amongst a mountainous backdrop, the lodge is situated in the heart of the Twyfelfontein Uibasen Conservancy, only 4kms from the rock engravings at Twyfelfontein.

The lodge is a joint venture with the Twyfelfontein-Uibasen Conservancy, an undertaking with the local community, who benefit from tourism in the area. At the same time, they become more accustomed and aware of the importance of protecting both wildlife and the immediate environment.

The deliberate use of thatch for the rooms, natural stone and paint colours, that blend in with the surrounding rock formations, minimize the visual impact on the setting. It has been built right into the rocks. Although quite a large camp, it still manages to exude a certain amount of rustic charm and charisma.
